PRAISE THE LORD.

McComu, Miss, April 8, 1887 DEAR INTERIOR .- The second McComb meeting, protracted bayond all expectation to the 10th day, has been marked by even a deeper interest, il possible, than the first After our departure, the old, old occurrence came to pass; the "wolves" came in, "not sparing the flock " Of course this is from our standpoint. From the other side it would be described as an attempt to up root fatal or dangerous error. Each side pression, and the "judgment scat of Christ" aione can settle authoritatively the final charitably inclined right and wrong ni the matter But when we came buck we found a me he me "fail ing them for fear;" to whom we returned time. This invitation to the Capital is one se were wishing for, but saw no immediate prospect of getting; and supposed we should have to pass it by for the present. At the lith hour came a very littering petition, signed by the most prominent persons of the city, and including the names of the Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, Supreme Judge, etc., etc., with the Chamber of the House of Representatives for an audience room. I'raise the LORD!

We have had reproductions of your here, till she poor gardeners have been almost driven to despair, i think the figs have been well nigh annihilated; the peach es greatly injured, though there are a good many yet let; and the young corn and tender garden vegetables frost nipped once and again. How is this for a problem and solution? A man had three cone and all the property he owned was 17 horses. Dying he made a will that the oldest son should have one half of his property, the second oldest onethird, and the youngest one ninth. The boys were unable to divide the horsee among them and called in a wise man to make the division for them. The wise man had a horse of his own which he added to having been willed one half, the wice man set apart nine borees, the second baying been willed one-third was given six horses, turesque murderers 42 are "ladies" and not and the youngest having been willed one ninth was given two horses. Thus it will he seen that the wise man would have his horee left and the hoys would all get more than their share.

For the Legislature DR. J. D. PETTUS. Of Crab Orchard.

GEN. HEWITT telle us that under the new law the assessment of the property in the State has been increased $95,000,000 in round numbers. The increase comes principally from money and etocks, which have heretofore escaped taxation; the value of town lote has been increased 33 per cent. and perconalty 40 per cent. Under the oid law persons engaged in agriculture paid 51 per cent. of the entire taxes; under the new the proportion has been reduced to 46 per cent. In addition to this the rate of taxation has been reduced 5 cents on the $100 and the next legislature will reduce it still further. The farmers and small tax-payers are greatly helped by the new hill and the hurden of taxation will be more evenly di vided on all classes under it. Gen. Hewitt drew the original hill, making the change in our revenue laws, and if it had passed exactly as it came from him, the objections jump. now neged against it could not be sustained.

GEN, CLAY save "with all his faults" Col Bradley deserves well of his party. If there are any faults in our esteemed and gallant friend, we fail to perceive them. He is as handsome as Appolo, as brave as a lion, as Capital, emert as a sleei-trap, as ciever as a woodeawyer and as brilliant as an electric light. with him, and to this Gen. Ciay evidently refers, ie his shape. In that, we must admit, as much as we admire and love the gellant colonei, he is a little off. His legs ere too short and being almost broad as he ie iong, he has too much the appearance of • fat Poland China pig to he as beautiful in body as he is handsome in countenance. We say this, however, more in sorrow than $350,000; insurance $180,000. in anger, for we are confident that if he is given time his breadth will increase till he ie broader than he is long and then he will be more chapely in appearance.

WE very much incline to the belief that the Interetete Commerce enaction will redound to the disadvantage of the democratic party. As it stands it seems that about the only present result of the bill is a large increase of the army of office-holders at tremendous cost, without any apparent good return. The commission has decided at each of its members is entitted to secretary at $100 a month, the office huilding at Washington is to cost $100,000 a year end so on. The republicane, if we mislake not, will use this profligacy in the next campaign for all it is worth.

If the charges are true, and they ought to know, both of them would be mighty good men for the party to sleer clear of.

In addition to the strong following that Senator Harris has here, there seems to be a feeling even emong the Buckner men that he should be given the vote of Lincoln county as a matter of courteey, and in reciprocation of favore shown by Madison county, which has always evinced a neighborly disposition towards us. SAVAGE ORNAMENTS, IN DAKOTA. Signification of Eagle Feathers-The Scalp Lock-A Medicine Man.

There are a few ornaments now in use with my meaning among the Dakota Indians. Eagle feathers, the number worn showing the number of enemies killed, the wing feathers of the bald headed eagle denoting male, and the black engle feathers denoting women, are perhaps most prominent. If they have scalped the enemy a broad red streak is painted upon the feathers. If the person killed was of prominence or reputation, the foather is sometimes dived red. Small sticks wrapped with porempine quills are sometimes attached to the quill of the feather and little pieces of white fur glood to the ends. No one will wear an eagle feather unless entitled to it, as they believe it will fly away from their headest wern unlawfully.

The scalp lock is still worn even aming the so called civilized indimes. They arrange the scalp lock proper on luch across, and the around this very firmly a headband, and then the hair is branded and an otter skin is tost around it starelly, forming a braid at lea t two, and sometimes as umch as four feet This is legt caled for the enemy an Indian has the time, and the person killed is of Importance, he will scale off the whole from beneath the cyclrows, including the oyes. Royalty Nat to He Envied. The unremement of the dementia of Princess Thyra of Denmurk will hardly provoke much surprise among those who are acqualited with the peculiar character of her husband, the Duke of Cumberland. The latter, who is a claimant both of the duchy of Brunswick and of the defunct Kingdom of Hanover, is one of the most unpopular nobleman, so called, in Europe. The first Duke of t'umberland was as cross-eyed mornlly as he was physically; lds father was blind from bls youth, while the present duke was born without n nose. A Glimpse at the Czar. The reserve which for many reasons was forced upon the present czar while yet helr apparent seems to have grown into a settled habit. In society, during the St. Petersburg season, which, however, plainly bores him as nucle as it visibly delights the empress, there s nothing more striking than his majesty's mild mid severe look at one and the same time. It is curious in this connection that among all his portraits painted since his accession there is no uniform and settled slamp of expression given to the face. For some time past, however, the gloomy cloud that used to hang about the brow long after the terrible leath of his father has been gradually wenring away. In order to be seen perfectly at his ease, he should be observed with his children in the grounds of Gatschina, where he is much more at home than in St. Petersburg. His physical strongth, it is said, fully accords with his enormous size of body and land, and one often hears it said that he can easily break an ordinary horseshee with bare bands. Of one thing there can be little doubt, and that is certainly his trancity and obstinacy of .quinion and purpose, -St. Petersburg Cor. London Pimes

It is noticeable that while the number of men of lessure is increasing, women of leisure are rapidly disappearing from the face of the This is a natural result of the conditions which have released certain men from the necessity of work, even if it be referred back to that division of labor which has assigned the men the making of money and to women the spending of It. The increase in wealth brings with it an increase In those netivities-social, educational, philanthropic-which are largely in the hands of women, and which make large demands upon time and strength. These causes would be enough to explain the nomenon I lave mentloned, but there is an additional one in the host of women's clubs which have sprung up within the past few years, and which are now, let us liope, at their zenith. One lady of my acqualatance belongs to nine. I am by no means sure that this number is her limit; but these nine I know of, and all but three of them are of a severely hselplinary character. Of these three, the oue nearest approaching a scheme for names ment is a whist club; and at the meetings of the other two, papers are rend and the enjoyment is primarily of an intellectual character. CONTROL OF THE EYES.

Something That is l'articularly Neces sary in the City of New York.

The greatest secret of enjoying existence in New York is that one must be absolutely the ninster of lils own eyes. Hningry Joe, the arch confidence operator, used to say that he could illstinguish a stranger by his hat or shoes. The blea that these betray men is so deep rooted that many strangers always buy 12 & 14 West Main Street. New York hats and shoes as soon as they arrive, while others who expect to come often to town order these wearables from city shops. Bowery. But whitever one looks like he must controllils eyes or life will be a perpetual torment to him. Our dudes and Anglormniac society carry the thing too far. They go about forever looking over every one's hend, or else staring with a dead and live glassy look, insulting alike to whomsoever they glance at and to their own Intelligence. This they think "the grand air" and their admirers dub it aristocratic. A word politician the other day said to me that the leader of a certaln political faction was "gitting 'ristocratic." asked him how he was showing this. "Oh," said the heeler, "he has n tired look, and he don't seem to see you 'less he wants.' But by eye control I mean the seeing of everything without being seen to do so. I was talking the other day to a lady whose receptions are very popular, and I remarked that people commented very curionsly on the difference between her manner in doors and her curriage on the street. In doors she was all affability and uncenscious ease, and out of doors she was a poker.

"It's all put on out of cloors," she said; "re goes on with my bonnet and wrap I was in endless trouble as long as I yielded to my inclination to be natural and curcless. "There had been an account of an elopement in the morning papers," said the com-mercial traveler, "and I was thinking of h when a couple drave up to the country hotel and registered, 'Mr. and Mrs. So-and-So.' I winked at the boys and sald: 'Here's for a joke.' The old hotel keeper was n very dear friend of nilne and took my word for gospel truth, so when I said: 'Look out for 'em! think I know 'em, and they are eloping and they are not married, etc., you ought to have seen the old fellow. He scowled and lifted his chin, and wngged it up and down hulf a dozen time, sort of as though he was thinking it over, and then he walked off. All the other boys in the house were put on to the joke and we agreed to watch the old man and see what he did.

"Supper rang, and the party of traveling men took sents at one table and left the new arrivals to the sole occupancy of another. The lotel proprietor, who helped serve at the talde, took his tion as much as possible behand the young couple, his eye all the time watching their every nevenent.

Near the small town of Decise, in Nivernois, France, the family of La Brienne had resided for meny generations. After the revolution they were greatly reduced, but lived in the old chateau, positively refusing to cast off their pride and engage in any occupation that might yield emolument.

Marguerite, one of the daughters, allenated her family from her forever by marrying a clerk in a mercantile house, and her name was never mentioned by any member of the family. But Marguerite's husbaud rose step hy step until he became a partner in the firm, and then planted himself in Paris, where he rapidly acquired an Immense fortune. In 186% he retired from husiness, and he and his wife-all their children having died-weut to reside near Reims. In 1882 M. Trevoux died and his widow came into possession of all his estate, valued at many millions of francs.

A consultation was held among the relatives of Mme, Trevoux as to the best course to pursue so as to secure for themseives her wealth at her denth. It was thaily arranged that Charles St. Dinan should go to Chumpagne and see how the land lay. He was to take every means to preserve his incognito, and to return as soon as possible with a full and necestate account of nil things pertaining to the widow, who was new verging on 80, and in the ordinary course of nature could not last iong

When tharks reached Reims he learned that she nos avarietous and grasping and that it room desire was to heard money and to live as 1 ag as possible. She lived in good style, but kept no company, and was selioni visited by any one except her lawyer. Her property, so far as could be ascertained, was chiefly in rents and stocks, though the estate on which she lived was worth probably 250, Oid francs.

Here he began to practice his profession as a physician. He called on M. Jugon, Mme. Trevoux's lavyer, and consulted him as to a small property belonging to Mme Trevoux which he thought of buying, and he which, of course, the lawyer was interested. The spoke to the lawyer as though he had a large sum of money at his command.

"I shall stay here if there is any likelihood of my succeeding," he said, "and if I resolve to stay I will buy this property."

Now, the lawyer bad asked three times as much for the house and land as they were worth, and Charles St. Dinan well knew it; but he was playing a bold game, and the lawyer's good offices were necessary to his

"If I could secure three or four wealthy patients," said Charles, "that would go n very great way toward insuring to me pros perity.

The lawyer requiesced in this sentiment, aml it didn't st. the Charles when, in the course of a week, be viss summened to prescribe for Muie, Trevony. This was what he was aiming at all along. He was very successful in building up the old lady, who was in atter ignorance of his relationship to herself.

"Madam," said he, "you have a splendid constitution, and if you follow good medical milvice you may live for many, many years, I have no hesitation in saying that I can insure twenty more years of life for a certainty, though, of course, you may live much

The old lady was greatly pleased with this kind of tulk, and the result was that Dr. St. Dinan was a daily visitor at her residence, and, being able to furnish her with many antidotes to growing feebleness which were not known to the old fashloned doctor who had previously attended her, he soon obtained great influence over her.

If the remarkable incidents which follow had not been brought to light in a court of justice they would have been incredible 18, itinan soon spent most of ids time at the instean, and was freely consulted by Mine. Trevoux on business and other matters basides her health. Sire was a wonderfully able and acute woman, and somewhat astonished St. Dinan with her ready wit and cunning. He handled her with great judgment, however, and in the time began to just in operation those plans which he had long before formed.

Her valuables were stowed away in n large closet in her bed room, and this she always kept locked. St. Dinan resolved to possess himself, as a lirst step, of some jewelry which he knew she possessed. First of nil, he hiduced her to remove her bed into an adjoining room, as it had better ventilation, at the same time showing her that the connecting door could be open, and that all her property would be as safe as though in the room where she siept.

One day he brought a small portmanteau into her parlor and begged the use of her keys, as he said he had lost the one to the portmantean. He managed to take an impression in wax of the key to the outer door of the room which she had formerly slept in, and of the key of the closet.

Or the morning preceding his intended ruld on the closet he put an ingredient in the old lady's medicine to make her sleep soundly, Instead of leaving the chatenu, he serreted hanself in the library, and, when all was still, went up stairs and istened at the old lady's hed room door. He unlocked the door of the adjacent room with the duplicate key, and entered. A faint light was burning in the bed room, sufficient to make him see what la was plont.

While he was standing to the middle of the com in a fistening attitude he heard a rouse which indicated that Mme Trevoux was arising from bed. He hastily hid himself be bind the window curtains. The next moment Mme. Trevoux, in her night dress, stalked into the room with a bruch of keys in nor hand. She went straight to the closet, oened it and runninged about. Then she brought forth a large leathern case. Laying it on the floor she relocked the door and, iffting the case, returned to her room. St. Duran heard her get into bod, and all was silent

After waiting for about ten mannes St. Dinan stepped cautiously toward the bed and peered at the occupant. There was no doubt that she was asleep, and by her side key the i atherneuse. St Dinan was then satisfied that she had walked in her sleep and was still under the effects of the powerful sequrities which he had given her.

He quitted the room and left the chateau by a private door which led into the gardens. When he reached home he opened the case, which was simply clasped, and found it empty! Next day, on visiting Mme. Trdyoux, he found her in a state of great nervons prostration. She told him that the previous night she had dreamed that some one was robbing her and that she must have arisen in her sleep and procured a certain i afther case in which she had a large sum of money and notes. When she awoke in the morning she found the bundle of notes lying In the bed beside her, but the case was gone, on examining the place where she usually kept it, it was not there.

St. Dinan expressad great surprise, but advised her to say nothing to any one about it, for he was afraid of her mentioning it to Lawyer Jugon, whose suspicions might be

During the day she spent her time in a small sulte of pariors on the ground floor overlooking the front garden, which was arranged in terraces, along which she occasionally strolled. St. Dinnu, afraid of amther experience similar to the former, and fearful of using a drug to stupefy the old lady, resolved to attempt to get at the valuable contents of the closet by daylight. While the domestics An Artist's Attempt to Secure the Pictwere at dinner he reached the room in safety. 1 He ransacked the closet and stowed away in his pockets several valuable jewels and a large roll of notes of the bank of France,

He relocked the closet and was rendy to gult the room, when he heard a click. Turnlng hastily he saw a panel hi the wainscoted wall move laward, and the next moment Lawyer Jugon stepped into the room.

It is not needful to recount all the conversation between these two rasmis, Jugon recommended the return of what St. Dman had steien, as the loss might be discovered. He dis fosed to St. Dinan how he had become thoroughly acqualuted with the secrets of the chateau when a boy, as he was the son of the former steward, and how he had recently ascertained where Mine. Trevoux kept is r vainable papers, etc. He had procured a duplicate key to the closet, and had within three months removed stocks of great value and replaced them with papers of no value, Now he thought it was nearly time to clean ont what was left, then they could quit the country before the theft was discovered. Ever since the circumstance of themissing ather case the mind of Mme, Trevenx had been on the rack. She had searched her closet and had discovered the fact, that the stocks had been abstracted and weathless papers substituted. Some one, she knew, who had her confidence was rolding her, and her suspicions fell upon the dector. If sha disclosed her mistrust in any way, hinv casy for him to poison her. True, she had never taken his medicine since that night, but then there might be many ways known to a physi cian of untroducing poison into the human system of which she was Ignorant. So she resolved to discrin all suspicion on the doctor's part by treating him with the number apparent contidence.

Then she secretly dispatched a letter to Ceylon, to a M Leconte, who had formerly been a clerk in her husband's employment. M. Leconte obeyed the urgent summons, and in due time secretly reached Reims.

When he was infermed of the circumstances of the robbery he quietly waited on the chief of police and arranged with lilin to be at the chateau at a certain hour. When St. Dinau arrived, as usual, Mine. Trevoux received him graciously. Then entered Leconte and the The business was brief.

"M. St. Ihnan," said Leconte, "I am Mine, Trevanx's friend. This is the chief of police; Mure, Treronx has been robbed of vulumble roperty, and we have reason to uspect you. What have you to say?"

St. Dinau had nothing to say. The plended that he was Mure. Trevoux's nephew, and confessed his association with Jugon in the erime. Ingon was speedily captured and most of the stocks were recovered. Mine Prevoux's negliew told the story on a court as it is told here, and he and Jugon were sent to risan for 10 years each.

me, when he suddenly stopped and, to my surprise, seemed to fully take in the situation. At this stage I felt quite sure that one of our babies, especially at this tender age, would have begin to cry and more than likely retraced its steps to the lait from whence it had issued. Not so, however, this Infant Navajo: and, mark the difference. He steadily watched my every movement, and was evidently determined to reach the lower Very cautionsly leaving the path on int. the side furthest from me, he was, in the next lustant, behind one of the sage brushes, which was someting over a foot tailer than the bally. From this position he psered through the leafless twigs at me to see what I would do about it. A little nuneved at this turn in alfairs, I throw the focusing cloth over my hend and turned the instrument on him. Taking a b autuge of time temporary concent ment of my heroi, he ran, thoroughly baby fashion, to the next lower brush, a distance of some ten feet, where, bidnig as before, he croueled down and staved at me like a young lynx through the twigs. He now looked, for all the world, the young Indian cub at bay, with all the untive instincts of his ancester or the abert, and making use of all the strat ezy his baby mind could muster. AN INTERESTING PROTURE. It was a wonderfully interesting picture to study; but, fearing the? I would lose a permanent mementa of it, I turned to lift my instrument, with the view of taking a much nearer position, when, again facing the brush where I had last seen the baby, it was, to my great surprise, not there, but had scampered to the next lower one, in the direction of the hut for which it was bound. A full grown huck of the tribe could not have possibly managed this last movement my better. As It ran to the still next lover brush, I was astonished beyond measure (for, I take it, I nm a g nd stalker myself, how it took advantage of everything that lay in the short intervosing distance, and how, after it arrived at the laush, it immediately took a position on the opposite side of it, from where t could make mother quick start, and yet not lose sight of my movements. And, mind you, all this from a baby only 10 months old at the most As it was rapidly gaining its point and approaching the ever hat, in sheer desperation I ran up on is last place of concealment, holding inv camera in such a way that I could immedi ately place the tripod in position, which I successled in doing with the lens leveled difeetly at its head, and not three feet from it, It now stood up to the full extent of its baby height, and giving vent to a germine infan tde bawi, it made a break for the final point of its destination, for there was nothing else left for it topic. It is almost needless, in add that, before I could focus and insert a plate, my Nuvajo baby was out of range. Ami, fearing that its an rered mother implif appear at any point, at the cry of alarm of er child, I humediately for sook the ground My object in making a record of such an interesting case as this is to simply draw after tion to the fact that the native instinct of these American Indians is exhibited in their yoning at a wonderfully tender age; and in this particular they differ vastly from our own children at a corresponding time of life, and reared, as they have been for ages, in a dvillzed environment.- Nature, An Insane Woman's Strength. "One of the most striking things about inanity is the wonderful strength of the lunnties," said an ex-employe of the Buffalo State insane asylum while detailing his experience with the demented. "One day I was assisting to carry a trunk through one of the wards when a little woman putient laid hold of my coat and expressed the intention of putting me in the trunk. I tried to pull away, but her delicate hand held on with an iron grip. Force was the only alternative of remaining there until some other whim took possession of her, so we resorted to muscular persuasion. Would you believe that it took three strong men and a woman to make her let go! We pulled her slender fingers back one by one, each man hanging on to a single finger, until finally the parting of the thund and the first finger released the garment. To bend back a lingle finger was like bending a heavy telegraph wire. It appears as though the lunatio has the power of concentrating all ills strength in a single part of the body at the expense of other portions in a manner impossible to a rational person, "—Buffalo Courier.

THE ORIGIN OF GEOMETRY.

The Discovery of Its Principles Ascribed to the Ancient Egyptiana.

The origin of this science is ascribed to the Egyptians, who, having their landmarks annually washed away by lnundations, in efforts to devise a plan for readily restoring them. discovered the principles of geometry. From them Thales, of Miletus, one of the "seven wise nien" of Greece, is said to have learned the elements of the science. He introduced it into threece about 600 B.C. Pythagoras, half Big Circus Pay ttotis.

The salary list of n goods and circus inn nuvwhere from giant to $1, ast a day - Pope paugh's pay roll calls for the latter amount and the list of the Barunm show is claimed to be even higher. These thances melade the pay of perform is, agent, lostlers, canvain a, grooms and training of trazer backs, as the latter are facetionsly called, Of course, the performers get the most money. Last season the Harmun people paid an English tracef trapezo performers, Lelo, Leia and Sylvester the latter a man 8250 a week and their expenses. Forejoingh pays William Showles, the barelank rider, and a week and yet has some equestrians in his engler who draw as low as $25 or $50 weeker

Acrobats are always well paid when their act is graceful and diverting. They generally travel in tenins of two and three and do what are known as "brother nets." three Lamartine landhers, for instance, draw $150 a week from Forepaugh's pay clerk Many of these performers do two or three different acts, and, indeed, they will tackle almost anything from a tlying Imprze to a horizontal bar, while nearly nil the goest turn blers and leapers, are easily and advantage onsly used in "tip grand tumbling and finale so foundar to circus gos re. There are many grouns of perferences who turn themselve late "families," and by doing a daring a t of some novel kind are often able to get $300 or $300 a week. Plowns are exceedingly plentle ful, and may be cagaged for as low as a da week. Still, g col jesters like Billy Birke, Johnny Purvis Clealey Madden and Bidy Conrad get $75 n week - Boston 1b rall.

The other day while a young deputy postmaster was engaged at his work in stepped one of our bashtul maidens of sweet 16 with a money order winch she desired to invecashed. She han led 14, with a bightub suide, to the official, who, after closely evaluating it, gave her the messey i' called for At the same time he asked her if she had read what was on the margin of the order. "No, I have not," she replied, "for I cannot ninke it out, Will you please send at to me?" The deputy read as follows "I send you $3 and a dozen kisses." Glancing at the basinful girl he sald: "Now I have paid you the money and I suppose you want the kisses." "Yes," she said, "if he has sent me any kisses I want them too." It is hardly necessary to say that the balance of the order was paramptly paid, and ia a scientlife manner at that, and eminently satisfactory to the inniden, for she went out of the office smacking her lips as if there was a taste upon them she had never encountered before. - Easton (l'a.) > CIRCUIT COURT. - After occupying the court for nearly three days, the suit of tha First National Brnk against Lovi Hubble for the interest on a note for $3,180 was given to the jury at 5 o'clock Wednesday. Mr. Hubbie claimed that his signature to the note which was for the purchase money of the Stanford Milis was procured by misrepresentation and fraud on the part of the Bank, and that the contract was altered after the notes were aigned. At the conclusion of defendant's testimony the plaintiff moved the court for peremptory instructions and Judge Morrow decided to throw out all questions of fraud and other charges and limit the jury to the simple proposition: Whether the deed was in accordance with the first agreement or had been changed be twen the algning of the notes and its execution. After remaining in their room an hour, Judge Morrow called the jury out and held it till yesterday evening, when it was discharged standing 11 to 1 in favor of Hubbia. A Love Story by Henry Walterson.

They were bound together by the tendrils of a mighty love, this stalwart youth, and the sweet, confiding girl, whose tiny hand neetled so trustingly in large brown No. 10. ing moonlight on the front door steps. Only a forinight hefore, he, Harold Dudley, and rules and regulations for the carrying hrave and manly, had asked her, Birdie Oaborne, the heryleyed heauty of the anything that le in the heaven above, or Seventh ward, to he his honnie bride, and that is in the earth hencesth, or that is is she with a heart full of tender pession had told him in fluttering wordlets that he was the only man she had ever really and truly

Taen he rained kieses upon her fair brow and presend her to his panting bosom until he had nearly broken a rib, but she s.ood it with a hrave endurance that caused Harold to wonder reproachfully whether or not she had ever been there hefore. But cruel suspicions. He merely kissed her once more and asked her to go with him to see the Boston Lileads next Wednesday

She accepted with a mad enthueiaem that almost shattered his great sympathetic targe size. $1.

To night they have been cooing fondly for the accustomed three hours, and Harold was just about to say good night before Birdie's ftery hearted paw shot his gun out of the second story window to indicate that the witching hour of eleven had arrived

"B.rdte," ne asked with that sweet and touching eloquence which only belonge to a lover's sont, "are you quite sure you love me, Birdie."

"Yes, Harold," she cried passionately, 'my sweet true loye, I adore you."

"And would you do anything for me, my very own " he continued with a longing glance down into her deep, heryl eyes. "Aye, If srold," she answered steadfastly, 'anything. My pocket hook is up staire. How much do you wan ? ' .

Harold looked tired. "Not that, Birdie," he answered, rather enarply, "not that; you may keep your thirty cente."

"I'nen what is it, Herola?"

'I wish, Birdie," he answered, speaking slowly and calmiy, "I wish, my darling, of Superintandent of Public Instruction, subject to the Democratic State Convention. that you would go to your Uncle John Strattin early to morrow morning and ask him to shove that ninety feet of ground of mine on West Caestnut street of on Davis Brown or some other sucker right away, dec'd., will presant them properly certified to me I'm getting a little weak on down town property."
